ALL AT SEA

The republican campaign made two years ago by Senator Nixon has stimulated the party with the idea that the election this fall will result in a republican land slide.

It cost about $75,000, good, hard earned money to get Nixon a majority of three against a man who refused to violate the law on campaign expenditures.

Nixon, having no idea of making any further sacrifices from his pocket book, cast about for a man to lead the fight for the senatorial holdovers. They fixed on Charles Schwab as a man likely to be an easy mark. They gave it out that he was coming into the game with a million; but when the gentleman himself came to be consulted he declined to have anything to do with it. He recognized it as a leg pulling expedition, pure and simple.

Next Senator Riekey was approached and was tempted with the governorship. They told him he was a sure winner if he spent, say, $50,000, but he also recognized the nigger in the fence and declined to be worked. Several other gentlemen were approached with the same result. They all begged to be excused.

The latest is that a leg pulling committee went out to interview Senator Oddie with a view of getting him (and his money) into the fight. He is doing exceedingly well now financially, and they figured that they will be able to separate enough money from him to pay the expenses of the entire campaign.

The argument they made was that Oddie is a tenderfoot, unsophisticated in Nevada politics and "easy worked."

Those who have sounded him on the subject, however, say he is fully as fly as Tom Riekey and that taffy has no perceptible effect on him so far.
